The Charleston News.

SATURDAY, APRIL 5, 1873.

THY CHARLESTON DAILY NEWS "is designs -ted as the newspaper for the publication of "all legal notices, and official advertisements, "for the County of Charleston, under the act of February 22d, 1870, entitled an act to regu-"late the publication of all legal and public "notices."

NEWS OF THE DAY.

known to the public as the author of the spectacular drama of "The Black Crook," ends a remarkably successful career. The play referred to was the only one of any consequence produced by Mr. Barras, but this alone was sufficient to yield him a large fortune.

_The Marquis of Bute has refused to grant the tenantry of his estates an extension of time for the payment of their rents. The tenantry represented that the unprecedented rainfall of the past year had caused the crops of potatoes and turnips to fall, and that the wheat and barley had been damaged in harvest time, and in view of these disasters they begged for a postponement of the payment. They now have the alternative of paying immediately or vacating the lands.

-The scenes in Wall street, New York during the gold panic when it reached its climax rivalled in confusion and excitement those of the memorable Black Friday itself. The balls were in their glory and the Gold Boom fairly rocked with the surging of the excited throng of wondering buyers and sellers. The panic reached its height on Monday when the gold indicator touched 1183. A babel of voices followed this movement of the indicator. The shrickers rising on their toes sought for a new note in the human voice. They extended their hands as if they were expounding the most exciting passage in war declamation, while the typical broker put forward his longest arm and proclaimed in stentorian tones the latest quotation. Doubts as to the legitimacy of the sudden rise caused many to tremble and to shake one was seeking for trustworthy information as to what had given rise to the andden nanic. There were those who stoutly maintained that it was owing to heavy importations, while others said, with equal confithe announced treasury sale. The wise ones sald they knew the rise was coming, and that It was inevitable so long as the present ruinous policy of the treasury is continued. All manner of explanations were offered in the midst of the excitement, and, notwithstanding the uncertainty as to the cause of it, the brokers rushed into the Gold Room wild in their excitement, irrepressible in their fun, and quick to catch the bid er offer of every tresh operator who dashed up to the railing.

The settlement of the long ttrike of the colliers in South Wales, which has already been announced by cable dispatches, was attended with a display of independence on the part of the workingmen that commanded admiration. A few days previous to the settlement the officers of the union had appealed to the colliers to continue their resistance until they ob ained their own terms, and were promised assistance from unfailing sources to enable them to maintain the contest. The good sense of the men overcame any temporary feeling in favor of a protracted strike, however, as the situation of ruinous idleness was becoming simply intolerable. The spectacle of the workers going to and from their work at the mills and forges by hundreds suggested to some of the cooler heads that it would be wiser for them to do likewise than to persist in the vain struggle. A deputation waited upon the employers and assured them that they had come with serious and honest intentions to effect a settlement. The employers received them, respectfully and assured them of their sympathy and encouragement. Many of the workmen addressed their friends after the settlement had been effected. and improved the occasion by administering advice as to their future conduct, all of them expressing the hope that the strike would be a lesson which would never have to be repeated, but would lead to a better understanding hereafter between employers and workmen, and to the growth of sentiments of good-will and confidence on both sides. After giving vent to their feelings in this way, a resolution was proposed and carried, accepting the offer the most delightful of the social events of of the company to return to work upon terms which would secure to them the restoration of the old rate of wages.

-As stated in THE NEWS a few days since five millions of the new postal cards authorized by Congress will be delivered to the postmaster-general for issue by the Morgan Envelope Company of Springfield, Mass., on the first proximo. It has been stated that there will be two kinds of cards-one ruled, and the other without lines-but such is not the case. There will be one kind of card, and that will be of a cream color, five and oneeighth inches in length, and three inches in width. One side of the card (the one intend thus practically rebuke this bold grab game ed for the message) is entirely plain, and the other bears an ornamental scroll work bor- closing hours. der one-eighth of an inch in width. In the right hand upper corner is a picture of the Goddess of Liberty, surrounded with a scroll work border, in which are the words, "U. S. the sort, with the intimation that he isn't one Postage-one cent." In the left upper corner, of that kind of Congressmen. So much the

the words, in velvet-brown letters, "United States Postal Card;" and below, in smaller letters, "Write the address only on this side—the message on the other." Beneath this, and to the left, is the word "To," in scrip, followed by a line extending across the card, for the name of the party addressed. Below this are list of those entitled to the free delivery or two other lines-one being for the name of the postoffice, and the other for the county and State. Although it is not expected that $1 25. Six copies $10. Ten copies to one address any one will put more than the address on one side, there is no prohibition against filling both sides with writing, provided the address remains legible; nor is it contrary to law to place printing on the cards instead of writing. The cards will be distributed to postmasters throughout the country on requisition, the same as other supplies, and will be sold at the stamp window at one cent each. The question has frequently been asked whether a plain card, bearing a one cent stamp, will not be allowed to pass through the mails the same as the government cards; but the law prevents the use or transmission of any but the official cards. The cost of the postal cards is $1.39} cents per thousand, that being the bid of the successful competitor for their manufacture

Who was it that said that the old ballad of Chevy Chase stirred his heart like a trumpet? It is not now a question of martial verse or resounding rhyme; only of the few generous words spoken by a Charleston gentleman, standing face to face with a poet and a statesman, fit representatives of the thought and sentiment, the native intelligence and ripe culture, of our common country. Yet those few words stir the heart, quicken the pulse, and who shall doubt that they touched to the quick both Northern men and Southern men who heard

It has been our unfortunate habit in this far or not far enough. Where others would give the shadow and deny the substance, South Carolina has acknowledged the ac complished fact and denied the logical and inevitable sequence. And the reason is plain. The people, conscious of their honesty of purpose, were unwilling to expose themselves suew to the taunt that they were talking and writing for effect. Having within them the abiding conviction that the changes in the organic law growing out of the Confederate struggle demand the obedience of every good citizen, the people of South Carolina were not ready to lay themselves open to the charge that they were playing a deep game of dissimulation, which the morrow should disclose. Aye! we were tired of it, and the reason is given by Governor Porter in the brief address which we print to-day. The cause was lost, not the honor of the South; the men who honestly and bravely fought out these fights can afford to look each other straight in the face, strike hands and be friends again. These are the keynotes of the address. We can afford to look man or angel squarely in the face. We can afford to clasp hands, whatever the chasm any explanation to their victims, it is said, which yawns between. But we insist that the generosity and forbearance shall not be all on one side. In return for a renewe loyalty and a reunion of thought and purpose, we ask that the Southern people be treated as American citizens; that there be no distinction of North or South under the shadow of the flag. It is demanded of us that, like strong men, we bow to the inevitable; it should not be expected that we defile ourselves or brand ourselves with the foul name of traitor. That credit for sin cerity and devotion which the South gives the North, that conquering North must give the conquered South. It was said in the past that the South, more than the North, was led by politicians. However this may have been, it is certain that now the Southern people speak words of peace and good will-that they pass over the demagogue, whether his home be beyond the Potomac or dence, that the movement was influenced by not, and ask of their fellow-countrymen, the Union over, that the outstretched hands be joined together, and that no barrier be thrown up against those whose one aim is to mend their shattered fortunes and be at

> This has been the argument and plea of this paper these many days, and we welcome the remarks of Governor Porter as an ardent effort in the same good cause. That eloquent speaker is no new convert to the doctrine he preaches so well; but it is pleasant to know that his words were uttered to Northern as weil as Southern ears, and that they commanded the hearty approval of every good citizen who heard them.

A Reception at the Otranto Club.

The elegant hospitalities of the Otranto Club, of which the Hon. James B. Campbell is the president, were extended yesterday to a number of the distinguished visitors from the North who are now in the city, and a select party of ladies and gentlemen prominent in the fashionable circles of Charleston who were invited to meet them. The Northern guests were the Hon. William Cullen Bryant, Mrs. Parke Godwin, the daughter of the venerable poet and wife of the managing editor of the New York Evening Post; Miss Bryant and Miss Fairchild, of New York; Mrs. Horatio Seymour and Miss Seymour; Mr. Durand, the artist and critic; Mr. and Mrs. Colt, of Pittsfield, Mass.; Mr. Pomeroy, Mrs. Bigelow and Miss Briggs, from Massachesetts; and the Hon. John C. Hoadley and wife, of Lawrence, Mass. Among the Charlestonians were Colonel and Mrs. Richard Lathers, the Misses Lathers, Mrs. Miller, and others. The day was very pleasantly spent at the club-house on the outskirts of the city, and the occasion was in every way one of the season.

Congressman Elliott and His "Back Pay."

The Columbia Union reports that Congress man B. B. Elliott has followed the example of the large number of members who, having the fear of their consciences or their constituents before their eyes, have refused to profit by the $5000 of retroactive increase of salary which the last Congress was generous enough to vote to each of its members. All honor to the representative who has the courage to by which the expiring Congress disgraced its

-But we are checked in this eulogium by the counter statement from the Columbia Phoenix that Mr. Eillott has done nothing of and extending two-thirds across the card, are worse for him and his party, then.

Free Delivery of Mails.

Under the law passed at the last session of Congress, which goes into effect at the beginning of the next fiscal year, July-1, 1873, nineteen new postoffices will be added to the carrier system. These include all those cities having over 20,000 inhabitants which have not had the free delivery system under the old law, and Charleston, with its 48,000 inhabitants, is at the head of the list. The others are: Scranton, Pennsylvania; Columbus, Onio; Paterson, New Jersey; Kansas City, Missouri; Mobile, Alabama; Fall River, Massa chusetts; Springfield, Massachusetts; Peoria Illinols; Covington, Kentucky; Quincey, Illinois, Evansville, Indiana; Oswego, New York; Elizabeth, New Jersey; Savannah, Georgia; Poughkeepsie, New York; Camden, New Jersey; Davenport, Iowa; St. Paul, Minnesota. There are ten other cities with population approximating but not quite reaching the 20,600 required by the law to entitle them to tree delivery. One of these is Norfolk with 19,256 population by the last census. Under the old law 50,000 population was required to entitle a place to carriers, but the postmaster-general was allowed some discretion, and several cities having less than that number were endowed with the privilege. Some of the cities now served by carriers have less than 20,000, but it is not proposed to withdraw the privilege.

The San Domingo Ring.

The New York Sun publishes a four-column expose of the San Domingo Bing, giving a complete history of its operations from the be ginning, with names, dates and documents. It is stated that the speculating project began with a Ring calling itself the Great American West Indian Company, so far back as 1863. The company managed to sell $160,000 of stock, and then closed their doors in the faces of their creditors without enabling them to Southern country, since the war, to go too get any of their money back. At a later period the Ring took another name, and started out again with encouraging signs of success. Their plan was to take in a number of promi nent men for the purpose of securing their personal influence in favor of annexation President Baez was roped in, and he it is alleged, came od to Washington and secured the influence of a number of leading officials there, including President Grant and General Babcock, who, it is said were induced to lend their influence to the proposed scheme for purchasing Samana Bay with an ultimate view to the annexation of the island. All Washington was turned into a lobby, and there was a persistent effort to enlist an overpowering influence in its favor. President Grant, it is said, became more and more enthusiastic over the scheme of the stock-jobbers, and urged upon Congress the scheme of annexation as if his private interests were involved in the matter. The ques tion as to who received the $150,000 paid by General Babcock for the lease of Samana Bayis left open for speculation. There is authority, it is alleged, for saying that a large portion of it went into the pockets of those who lent their influence to the scheme, as only a small amount of it was received by Baez, and the company, with their assistants, after securing $200,000 by the sale of their stock, never made and disappeared with the profits.
